About Windsor Morris

Welcome to Windsor Morris – one of the longest-established and finest women's Morris teams in the world. You can see us performing at venues in and around Windsor, further afield at Festivals and as guests of other Morris teams.

We are easily spotted in our sparkling white kit, with splashes of green, red and yellow on our rosettes and ribbons providing a colourful contrast. Watch out for Cherry, our 'Fool' (with the Round Tower hat) – she acts as our MC and can give us a noisy whack with the bladder if we step out of line! Our second fool, Sally, is given to limericks.

The dances are performed to the lively music of the melodeon, accompanied by an uplifting drumbeat. We have interpreted and evolved our dances from those collected in the early 20th century from the English Cotswold villages of Badby and Brackley. We aim to dance in a lively and energetic manner and we like to create new dances. Like our predecessors, we are keeping morris dancing alive in the 21st century by adapting it and we now have our own tradition of 'Windsor on Thames'.

About Morris Dancing

Despite the romantic appeal of pagan roots, the first evidence of morris dancing comes from about 1450. Why it started is unknown. The dances done were quite different from today. For a long while, there were professional morris dancers who were highly paid by the finest in the land (and the musician was always paid more). It was a sign of prestige to have morris dancing at celebrations.

The morris dances you see these days have evolved over the centuries. The term morris dancing covers a number of forms including those with clogs, bells, hankies, sticks, swords and disguised faces. What links all these styles is that the dances are done for show.

Morris groups are all amateurs now. Like any street entertainment, we hope you will enjoy our performance and tokens of appreciation from you in the form of coins (or notes!) of the realm are welcome. Look out for our collecting tin and its decoration.

Each year we make a donation from our collections to a local charity. This year we will be supporting Thames Valley Adventure Playground for children and adults with special needs. See www.tvap.co.uk
